Handwritten text in Arabic script, likely a religious or historical document, written on a piece of parchment or paper with irregular edges. The text is arranged in several lines, with some words appearing to be in a different script or dialect. The document is heavily stained and damaged, particularly along the left edge and bottom. The text is written in a cursive style, characteristic of older Arabic manuscripts. The ink is dark, and the background is light, though the parchment has a mottled appearance. The text is difficult to read due to the damage and the cursive nature of the script. The document is oriented vertically, with the text running from top to bottom. The top of the document is slightly torn, and the bottom edge is jagged. The overall appearance is that of an ancient or well-used manuscript.
